

Kym Hawksworth Team Leader

As an Architectural Designer, when I'm working on a project I'm always looking for opportunities to bring out its 'uniqueness'.

I'm also a Registered Building Practitioner so for me it's about all those small details that can make even a straightforward project stand out so that as well as the creative aspect, you can be assured a high level of expertise and conscientiousness.

With almost 25 years in the design industry, I've worked in a broad range of areas from running my own business to working as an in-demand contractor to high-end building and design companies. This means when I'm working on your project I'm drawing from a vast bank of experience, diversity and practicality.

Drawing is in my DNA, I can't remember a time I wasn't designing something. I still own a box of Derwent pencils I was given at the age of 10 and from the age of 15 all I ever wanted to do was design buildings so you can be sure I'm in this for the long haul. Nothing inspires and excites me more than taking your ideas, putting pen to paper to turn them into a design concept and then watching it grow into its built form.

I get such pleasure from being part of the journey to helping you create a space that feels like home (whether that's for you or your client).

When I'm not in the office, I'm constantly trying to step out of my comfort zone and embarking on new adventures (I recently hiked the Camino de Santiago trail for 34 days). This means I'm always looking at things from new and different perspectives as well as thinking outside the box. So give me your property puzzle and I'll make it fit!
